Prayers go out to all the families and friends of those involved in this horrible tragedy. On behalf of Camp Max Straus I want to offer our deepest sympathies and condolences."

Schwab said that, as cabin counselor, Holmes was in charge of the care and guidance of about 10 children. His role was to ensure that the children had a "wonderful camp experience."

According to Schwab, Holmes helped the children in his care "learn confidence, self esteem and how to work in small teams to effect positive outcomes."

His statement continued: "These skills are learned through activities such as archery, horseback riding, swimming, art, sports and high ropes course."

Camp Max Straus is a nonsectarian program for children ages 7-14, which is run by Jewish Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Los Angeles.

Holmes is not Jewish.
